Mr. Jackson Comes to Visit
Mr. Jackson is the principal of our school.

Welcome to our school!
Sometimes students need to talk with Mr. Jackson in his office. This is serious when it happens.

Tell me what happened.
But Mr. Jackson does many other things that help teachers teach and students learn. He is in charge of running our school.
He makes the morning announcements every day.

Good morning, teachers and students!
Today is Monday.
He goes to lots of meetings with teachers, parents and other principals.
He makes sure everyone gets safely on the right bus or car at dismissal time.

Everyone is in their seats. This bus can leave now.
He makes sure our classroom has lots of books, equipment and paper to use.

This computer is for the students to use.
Sometimes Mr. Jackson comes to visit our class. It doesn’t mean we’re in trouble. He just wants to see what we’re learning.

Ms. Stevens’ Class

Welcome to 3rd Grade!

I want to see what this class is learning!
Here are some things that I can do when Mr. Jackson visits our classroom:

I can stay in my seat and work quietly.
I can raise my hand and ask,

“Mr. Jackson, why are you visiting our class?”
I can tell myself,

“Mr. Jackson just wants to see what we’re learning.”
I can answer any questions Mr. Jackson might ask me.

It’s OK, because I know I’ve been working hard and learning lots of things.
When Mr Jackson visits our class, it’s because he’s proud of the students in our school. I feel proud when he visits too.

We are proud of the students in our school!
The University of South Florida

Center for Autism and Related Disabilities

1-800-333-4530
(813) 974-2532

http://card-usf.fmhi.usf.edu